What are business rules?

They are rules that serve to define or restrict some action in the processes of a company. They are statements that describe how certain operations should be performed and if there are any limits that should be applied.

Business rules

You can start a business rule to calculate updated department employee expenses. The administrator sets them up so you don't have to. Your administrator might schedule business rules to run at a set time or at a regular interval. Administrators can also define business rules that start automatically when a form is opened or when data is saved to a form.

Examples of processes that use business rules:

- Price calculations
- Degrees of customer discount
- Approval of budgets
- loan approval
- Benefits offered
- Priority setting
