Kinds of trees

ID	Name	Features	type of weather
01	Poplar	Poplars are rapid growing but relatively short lived trees. They are widely distributed throughout the northern temperate regions, ranging from North America through Eurasia and western Africa.	Dry
02	Winged Willow	Winged willow trees are suited for frost climates, require appropriate frost being, provide branches "wing" sets to arch, creating a wind canopy that protects the ground below. These narrow leaves are light green in top, with silvery undersides and they turn yellow in autumn.	Cold
03	Oak	Oak trees are virtually impossible to overlook. Their massive branches encompass huge areas, although they are just one of the tree's most notable characteristics. The oak tree's great height is another distinctive feature. Oak trees often reach heights of up to 100 feet, and can extend to a width of up to 150 feet.	Cold
04	Cypress	Cypress trees are evergreens with scaly like leaves that are characteristically borne in whorls of three; these trees are often thicketed and more ornamental. The male cones are small and are produced at the tips of the branches. The female cones are much rounder and feature six woody scales arranged in two whorls.	Cold and rain
05	Palm Tree	bearing bananas	Warm
06	Pine	growing bananas	cold
