Evaluating the 4 rules on my page

1st Law: A computer shall not harm your work or, through inaction, allow your work to come to harm.

Evaluation: The page does not completely comply with this rule, since when selecting our products and going to another page if we return to the products page, we see how the products we chose have been unchecked, although this is more common than it seems correct in a sales page would be that regardless of your navigation the page does not damage the selection of products that you made 2nd Law: A computer shall not waste your time or require you to do more work than is strictly necessary.

Evaluation: The page does comply with this law, since there is no waste of time in any aspect or process of the page, everything has direct and precise accessibility

3rd Law: An interface is humane if it is responsive to human needs and considerate of human frailties.

Evaluation: The page does not fully comply with this law, since products are offered, their price is shown and there is a purchase button, but the page does not save or learn your preferences

4th Law: The user should set the pace of interaction.

Evaluation: The page does comply with this rule, since there is no impediment such as any counter clock, time frame or time limits on the page, the user can occupy it at the rate they want
