- Controlling or monitoring something
- Creating something
- Conversing (or interacting) with other people
- Being entertained
- Making a decision*

General Reasons for Using a Software System

With the surveys carried out, and a direct conversation with the person who requires the program, we have come to the conclusion that it meets the following reasons for using a software system:

- Finding some fact or object.

The products are going to be registered by their category, so finding a product is going to be a simple task, therefore it complies with this rule.

- Learning something.

When entering the web page, users learn the prices and names of the products, that way the next time they want to buy something, they will already know what to buy, so if it complies with this rule.

- Performing a transaction.

The web page is going to have an informative environment so it is not going to be possible to carry out a transfer, therefore it does not comply with this rule.

- Control or monitor something

The web page will have several options and one of them will be the follow-up of the products since with each purchase of the products there will be a summary of it and how many products there are of each thing, so the web page complies with this rule.

- Create something

The web page will have an environment whose purpose will be to inform about the products, so it will not be possible to create something that does not comply with the rule.

- Talk (or interact) with other people

The main objective of the web page is to present the user with the products that are in the stationery, so a messaging or call system would not be in the web page system, so it does not comply with this rule.

- Be entertained

The website is only for commercial use, so there would be no special entertainment, so it does not comply with the rule.

- Making a decision

It does not comply with this rule since it is only informative, so no process can be carried out in addition to informing.
